

Flight of Thoughts

What you can learn from a sentence – and what not

© Michael Kröger 2020

An icon turns a picture in your head - into a sentence on paper.

A picture is made – and thus reproducible.

A photo makes contexts possible – and eventually becomes an icon.

An exhibition makes intimacy public – and thus negotiable.

A sentence transforms a context into a formula – and makes other things conceivable.

A thought formulates a shift – and thus transforms something new into something alive.

A beautiful sentence has a potential value – but no reasonable price.

A thought flies – when it transforms a nearness into a distance.

A problem transforms its solution – into the form of its representation